GREENSBORO TELEGRAM.

VOL. VII. NO. 147. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1901. Price Five Cents

FIRST ISSUE OF THE COMMONER

BRYAN EXPLAINS WHY HE SO NAMED HIS PAPER.

Shows the Respectability of the Origin of the Word and Goes to Scripture in the First Round.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 23.—The first number of The Commoner, the weekly paper published by William J. Bryan, was issued this afternoon. It is a neat appearing sheet, typographically. The following is the salutatory:

"Webster defines a commoner as 'one of the common people.' The name has been selected for this paper because The Commoner will endeavor to aid the common people in the protection of their rights, the advancement of their interests and the realization of their aspirations.

"It is not necessary to apologize for the use of a term which distinguishes the great body of the population from the comparatively few, who, for one reason or another, withdraw themselves from sympathetic connection with their fellows. Among the Greeks 'hoi expolloi' was used to describe the many, while among the Romans the word 'plebs' was employed for the same purpose. These applications like 'the common people,' have been assumed with pride by those to whom they were applied, while they have been used as terms of reproach by those who counted themselves among the aristocratic classes. Within recent years there has been a growing tendency in some quarters to denounce as demagogic any reference to, or praise of, the common people.

"One editor in a late issue of his paper takes exception to the phrase and says: 'This expression is an ill-chosen one and should have no lodgment in the vocabulary of an American patriot and statesman. If we sought its origin we would look for it in that specious demagogy which has evolved the professional politicians, arrayed country against town—the farmer and his sons and daughters against the business and professional men and their sons and daughters—capital against labor, and built up against neighbors the impregnable barriers of prejudice and hate.' This quotation is reproduced because it fairly represents the views of those who criticize the expression. It has, however, an eminently respectable origin In the same chapter in which he denounced those who devour widow's houses and for a pretense make long prayers—in this same chapter it is said of Him: 'The common people heard him gladly.' No higher compliment was ever paid to any class.

"The term, the common people, is properly used to describe the large majority of the people—those who earn their living and give to society a fair return for the benefits bestowed by society—those who in their daily lives recognize the ties which bind together the mass of the people who have a common lot and a common hope. Sometimes they are called the middle classes, because paupers and criminals are excluded on the one hand, while on the other hand some exclude themselves because of wealth, or position, or pride of birth. The common people form the industrious, intelligent and patriotic element of our population; they produce the nation's wealth in time of peace and fight the nation's battles in time of war. They are self-reliant and independent; they ask of government nothing but justice and will not be satisfied with less. They are not seeking to get their hands into other people's pockets, but are content if they can keep other people's hands out of their pockets. The common people do not constitute an exclusive society—they are not of the four hundred: any one can become a member if he is willing to contribute by brain or muscle to the nation's strength and greatness. Only those are barred—and they are barred by their own choice—who imagine themselves made of a superior kind of clay and who deny the equality of all before the law. A rich man who has honestly acquired his wealth and who is not afraid to intrust its care to laws made by his fellows, can count himself among the common people, while a poor man is really not one of them if he fawns before a plutocrat and has no higher ambition than to be a courtier or a sycophant. The Commoner will be satisfied if, by fidelity to the common people, it proves its right to the name which it has chosen."

KUGLER SYNDICATE FAILS.

This Closes the Doors of the Greensboro 5 and 10 Cent Store.

The doors of the 5 and 10 cent store here are closed. The following notice appeared in the New York Commercial yesterday:

"Kugler Syndicate.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against the Kugler Syndicate, with its principal place of business at No. 21 Grand street, by the following creditors: John Joyce, $471; Albert B. King & Co., $144, and Thaddeus David's Co., $51. They allege that the syndicate is insolvent, and on Jan. 21 admitted its inability to pay its debts and willingnesss to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground, and that it also permitted three creditors to obtain attachments, thus giving them preference."

This is the syndicate which has established five and ten cent stores all over the country. It seems that where a store was established a local manager was secured, and he put in a good chunk of capital. It was that way here, where Mr. Fuller Reid, the manager, invested two or three thousand, it is said. Mr. Reid has been in New York several days.

The store here was not opened this morning. A gentleman connected with it was seen, who said that the embarrassment of the syndicate would be temporary, and that the store here would be reopened permanently in about ten days. When the store was opened it did a rushing business. Crowds of people thronged it pretty nearly all the time. The novelty had somewhat worn off, later, though business seemed to still be good.

Thirty Members at Shelby.

Mr. J. H. Primrose, of this city, District Deputy Supreme Archon of the Improved Order Heptasophs, returned today from Shelby, where he organized a conclave of thirty members. He next goes to McAdensville.

The Guilford Resolutions.

To the Editor of the Telegram:

The undersigned has been handed a paper which is claimed to be the first draft of the Guilford College resolutions. These "resolutions" as may be seen were very much altered before being given to the public, but those acquainted with all the facts had no trouble in reading between the lines what this "draft" confirms, the true inwardness of that remarkably puerile production.

The following is the original draft if the finder is to be accredited:

"Whereas, it has been repeate l shown that in our athletic games with Oak Ridge Institute it has been impossible for us (though claiming to be a college) to win a majority of the games unless we pick those seasons when we feel we are stronger and refuse to play at other times when we are not certain of victory, and,

Whereas, we secured a game with Oake Ridge Institute last fall with the express understanding both on the part of our faculty and this athletic association that the two schools should meet on the baseball field this spring, and

Whereas, we won over our opponents on that occasion and are in honor bound to meet them this spring, nevertheless, since it does not comport with the atheletic spirit of this college to regard too highly any such little thing as our pledged word, and since we learn that the Oak Ridge team is likely to be fully as strong as ours and we might lose the game; therefore be it

Resolved, That we the present Athletic Association of Guilford College do give it as our judgment that it would be highly injudicious to play this time, but that we will wait till a more convenient season, recalling that "He who fights and runs away, may live to fight another day," which sentiment has ever accorded with the high and holy feelings which pervade us all."

The above resolutions, Mr. Editor, have every appearance of being the genuine first draft and they certainly corroborate the facts and are justified of the same. VERACITY.

FUNERAL FEBRUARY SECOND.

THE QUEEN'S BODY WILL BE CARRIED TO WINDSOR ON THE FIRST.

The New King Proclaimed and the Band of the Foot Guards First Plays "God Save the King"—An Unknown Document Thrust Into the King's Vehicle.

By Wire to The Telegram.

London, Jan. 24.—The official proclamation announcing that Edward VII had become King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India was read at 9 o'clock this morning at St. James' Palace by William Henry Welbon, King at Arms since 1894, and formerly Windsor Herald. An immense crowd witnessed the ceremonies. At the conclusion of the reading there was a fanfare of trumpets and then the band of the foot guards played "God Save the King." Later the heralds proceeded to other points and read the proclamation. The streets through which they passed were lined with thousands.

A private family funeral over the remains of the Queen was held this morning at Cowes. The King left London early to reach Cowes for the simple ceremony conducted by the Bishop of Winchester. The body will be brought early next week to Windsor Castle. Emperor William will accompany the remains.

The funeral of the Queen will be conducted at Windsor Castle February 2. The body will be removed from Osborne House February 1. It was the expressed desire of the Queen that the funeral should be military in character. Several officers from Windsor arrived at Cowes this morning. They brought State regalia. A naval salute of twenty-one guns was fired at noon in honor of the King.

The King left Marlborough House at 11:28 this mornig for Osborne. As he drove through the streets on the way to the station he was greeted everywhere with great cheering. While the King was on the way to Victoria station a man sprung forward unhindered and thrust a document through the window of the brougham. The contents of the document are unknown.

At Madison House when the proclamation was read there were present the Duke of Portland, Sir Henry Ewart, Earl Pembroke, Hon Sir Spencer Ponsonby and Henry White, secretary of the American embassy.

News Shots By Today's Wire.

A great fire raged in Montreal last night and was not gotten under control till three o'clock this morning. The loss is variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to 3,000,000.

Count Tolstoi's son died this morning.

The Queen's death has created profound sorrow among loyalists in South Africa. Business is suspended, and all houses covered in black. The town hall at Natal was crowded at the service at noon today. Many persons in the audience were in tears.

The King of Portugal will start direct for London Saturday.

The Erie Railway passenger station at Lackawanna was burned early this morning, and all its contents consumed.

The Battleship Iowa, which has been cruising in Central American waters, arrived at San Diego this morning, with Rear Admiral Kautz.

Benjamin D. Sullivan, Dean of the New York bar, who long enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest graduate of Yale, died at his home in New York this morning, aged ninety-six years.

New Man at Grissom & Fordham's.

Mr. John H. Williamson, of Troy, has accepted a position as pharmacist at Grissom & Fordham's drug store. He is expected to arrive Saturday. Mr. Williamson is a competent druggist, and personally a very bright and popular young man.

OVER HILLS AND DITCHES.

A Runaway Couple Have a Lively Time Getting Married.

Special to The Telegram.

Graham, Jan. 24.—Graham was the scene of a marriage event out of the ordinary quiet and orderly way in which these occasions are usually solemnized. There were no bridesmaids and white-gloved gentlemen, no pompous and important ushers, no white-tied clergyman with solemn mein and serious words, no fond parental tears and benedictions. Instead there was a Lochinvar-like dash from Virginia, a hasty flight from home, the quick knot making of an expeditious justice of the peace, a scurrying over ditches and hedges, and a final triumph of love.

Mr. John M. Saunders, of Virginia, wooed and won Miss Lillia Barham, of Haw River. The old ones objected. But eluding their perseverence, he secured the person of his sweetheart and flew to Esq J. M. Turner, who, quicker than anything, united them at the home of Dr. J. R. Stockard at Graham. Then there was a wild run to get to the carriage in waiting, which when reached, sped the happy couple to Burlington, where they spent the night. This morning they went to Burlington, and one more triumph was scored by the love that laughs at locksmiths.

CAPTAIN SAM's VIEWS.

He Tells What He Thinks and Then What He Wants.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

Allow me to give my views on the liquor traffic: In the first place the movement for the dispensary was too soon by two years. It was sprung all at once. If it had been talked up we could have been better informed and better prepared for the fight and perhaps got the entire country to help it in, instead of only helping it out.

In regard to the fight now, I do not consider that it is mine. I knew last August I was fighting the barroom. It was simply dispensary or barroom, and the barroom got it. Now those that were or pretended to be so short-sighted have the fight on their hands. I do not think that it was so important for our representatives to have no regard for us and close the dispensary before July 1st, but it looks as if the few men who run the barrooms are the first to be counted. I think they could afford to wait until July 1st as all of the houses were occupied with a better business than a barroom.

I do not believe in licenseing at all, but if it is to be, reduce it to one or two hundred dollars and give the poor man a chance, and put them all over the city. If it is better to have ten than one, then have twenty, it will still be better. If one is a monopoly, ten are at a high license, and it is a liscening to do wrong, for I do not see how ten barrooms can pay a thousand dollars license, and all other expenses, and be honest.

Another thing is we are at present where we cannot afford to be all the time quarreling about barrooms. We want good business men as city aldermen, regardless of their religious or temperance views. There are some good temperance men who have nothing else in them

Now I have something to call your attention to that everyone can agree on. I want $250 for the orphans, and to commence at once. That is a cause you all can help in, from five cents up. It is not our business to want to know whether it was whiskey that made them orphans. They are orphans and need our help. When you meet me you need not be afraid to give me something, or you can give it to Messrs. C. M. Vanstory, J. J. Stone, W. Hennesy or Wm. Goffin, but be sure and give, and let us all go for the best interest of the city and the orphans.

SAM BROWN.

Mr. Tucker Goes Into Business.

Mr. J. W. Tucker, formerly of Greensboro, who has been traveling for Berry Bros. & French, of Baltimore, has purchased a half interest in the Newton Cotton Mill Store. The stock will be largely increased. Mr. Tucker will give his entire time to this business.

MEMBERS TAKE IT ALL BACK.

ARE VERY SORRY THAT THEY VOTED AGAINST CURRY RESOLUTION.

Dr. Carry Says the Only Lobbying He Ever Did Was to Help Senator Vance to Get Aid for the White People of the South to Bear the White Man's Burden.

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, Jan. 24.—In the Senate Glenn was announced among the members of the committee on Senatorial districts.

Majority and minority reports were submitted by the committee on the bill granting alimony in cases of absolute divorce.

The bill imposing graduated tax on corporation charters passed.

Allen of Wayne, introduced a bill in the House allowing the Governor to fill vacancies on the corporation commission.

The bill establishing a reformatory was introduced.

Whitaker of Forsythe rose to a question of personal privilege and said that his opposition to Dr. Curry's addressing the Legislature was based entirely on false information. He withdrew all opposition and apologized for his resolution and remarks. Craigh and Curtis also withdrew their remarks, saying they fully believed Dr. Curry's statement.

Dr. Curry Speaks.

At noon the House and Senate and State officers assembled in the House of Representatives and heard an address by Dr. Curry, who began by saying the only lobbying he had ever done at Washington was with Z. B. Vance to get aid for the white people of the South to bear the white man's burden.

TO KEEP FAST MAIL.

Birmingham People Are Much Disturbed Lest it be Cut Off.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 24—The threatened discontinuance by Congress of the appropriation for the fast mail service between Boston, New York and the South is causing widespread agitation throughout the territory affected, and commercial and municipal bodies are urging Southern representatives in Congress to work for the appropriation. The eastern mail which formerly reached Birmingham at ten at night, and was delivered the following morning, now reaches the city at 11:30 in the morning and is delivered in the early afternoon. To go back to the old order would greatly inconvenience the merchants.

Kruger Operated On.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Utrecht, Holland, Jan. 24.—President Kruger underwent an operation on the left eye at noon today. The operation was performed by Professor Smellon. The result was said to be satisfactory.

Rough Boys.

The entertainment at the Academy last night was attended by a small gathering except as to the school children, with whom the gallery was nearly filled. The performance lacked variety. Miss Potwin, the violinist, is worthy, very worthy. Miss Breneman, the reader, also deserves praise. Her recital of Enoch Arden was exceedingly well done. The occasion was very much marred by the misbehavior of the boys, presumably school boys. They acted very rudely in the gallery, and Mr. McAdoo had at one time to threaten to put them out. Their noise was unbearable. They stamped, smacked their lips at the ladies on the stage, and one time hissed the gentleman. It was no doubt school boy thoughtlessness, but it was very rude none the less.

Manager Atkinson says the company has 800 seats sold at Danville, where they appear tonight.

□Mr. S. A. Howard went to Durham this morning to attend a case in court there against the Western Union Telegraph Company. Chief W. A. Scott also went as a witness.

THE WEALTH OF THE STATE

[D. A. Thompkins, Before University Alumni of Mecklenburg, Nov. 8]

The wealth of the State lies in her undeveloped resources. The poverty of the State lies in her want of education and training of the people for the profitable development of these resources. Strangers are coming from other States that are more liberal to their people in matters of education, to take advantage of your rich resources. In letting this come to pass, is the State fair to her own home people? Shall the best resources, the best salaries and compensations go to strangers because our home legislators refuse the necessary facilities to home people to be as fairly taught and as fairly trained as those strangers?

I can see no reason why we may not in time make embroideries here as well as they are made in Switzerland. Whenever we develop the education and training necessary then our young men and young women will get the salaries for artistic designs. These designs can be made in the homes of of the very best people and the compensations earned in free and pleasant surroundings.

In such development the class that will be benefited far more than any other is the farmer. As the number of people in other occupations increases, every product of the farm will come more and more in demand. Farm products which were formerly without value will be saleable and more in demand. Land will increase in values. By good roads, which will come with other developments, farmers' wives and daughters will be free from the isolation of a home from which they dread to undertake a neighborly visit over the mud mire roads of the past and which are the rules even yet in most parts of this State. These farmers, wives and daughters ought to be the most earnest apostles of the cause of education and development in this State.

Before the civil war the people of the South were more than liberal in this matter of education. The result was manifest in the influence of her statesmen in national affairs.

Since the civil war the people of the South have had a gigantic task with the problem of saving Anglo-Saxon civilization. This problem has been handled with consummate skill and courage, but in the conflict the talents, resources and energies have been at all times so heavily drawn upon that scant recourse has been left available for the cause of education, and because of education and because of these conditions we find that the cause of education has been given less attention than it ought to have received.

Now, however, our race problem is a thing of the past. The fight for civilization has been nobly won. We have incorporated into the constitution of the State an amendment which emancipates the State from the controlling influences of ignorance, stupidity and vice. For the intellgent and moral element in the State the year of jubilee is come. Being now freed from the harrassments of a thirty years conflict with a confusion that approached semi-barbarism, that better element that won this great battle is now free to devote its energies and superb courage to the real reconstruction of the State. The first move towards the reconstruction must be the bringing of our educational institutions to the same relative standing with those of other States that they occupied before the civil war.

SIMMONS' ADDRESS OF ACCEPTANCE.

F. A. Olds in Charlotte Observer.

The House was crowded with people when the committee returned and Mr. Simmons ascended the Speaker's stand to signify his acceptance of the honor.

He said the General Assembly had conferred on him the greatest honor that could be conferred on one of her sons and it was a great privilege to have this opportunity to give his solemn pledge of fidelity.

"I have not the gift of language," he said, "to express to you my earnest, longing desire to serve my State and my country as becomes the high station you have called me to.

"The genius of even Shakespeare was never equal to express the feelings af a heart overflowing with gratitude. I can simply uncover and say that I am profoundly and sincerely grateful.

"I stand before you today as I have stood since November, helpless to utter in words the plenitude and power of my obligation. What you have done yesterday and today is but the ratification of the expressed will of the people at the polls. It was necessary that you should elect to carry out the law. We can live gratitude, my friends, if we cannot express it and I have asked our Heavenly Father that when I shall retire from the office the whole people will be able to say the man has shown his gratitvde by his honest services.

"I do not imagine a term of six years in the Senate a term of ease and luxury. I shall try to make it six years of study, work and watchfulness that I may better promote the interests of my State and my country. I cannot remember the time when my earliest and highest ambition was not to serve well my people and my country. I know my weakness and inefficiency, and so knowing, I enter upon the duties with a feeling of profound diffidence, but of hopefulness and trust, that by arduous efforts I may in the end rise to the full height of its requirements. Today the mantle which has fallen from the broad shoulders of Vance and Ransom and Jarvis has been cast upon me. It has been my fortune before to bear grave reponsibilities and while today is one of the sweetest moments of my life it is also one of the most solemn. I accept th honor with joy; I accept the responsibilities with a resolution to face them bravely. I here pledge, that while, like all men, I have my personal ambitions, I shall always try to serve alone the interest of my State and I here invoke the aid of the Almighty to enable me to keep this solemn pledge."

DESTROYING SALOONS.

Mrs. Nation, of Kansas, Having Gotten from Custody Renews Her Work on the Rum Mills.

Enterprise, Kan., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Carrie Nation began her crusade here today by demolishing a saloon and delivering a street lecture. After a temperance meeting at the home of C B. Hoffman, a well-known Populist leader, a temperance meeting was held at the house at 2 o'clock. She secured a hatchet and accompanied by Mrs. Hoffman, Mrs. L. Case, a leading Women's Christian Temperance Union worker, and another woman, who was veiled, invaded the business district. The two saloon-keepers had locked up their places and were in hiding. Mrs. Nation went to Schilling's place, smashed the glass doors, a big mirror, chopped gashes in the bar and broke all the glasses and bottles on the shelves. From the refrigerator she took out cases of beer and cracked each bottle. She kept up the work until Marshal W. R. Benham finally entered and, taking her by the sleeve, told her she must go out.

"What are you?" she demanded, "but a murderer and perjurer in protecting this unholy traffic?"

She then started for the other saloon, but it was well barricaded and offered no plate glass for her to attack. She finally went home with her companions. She said she expects to clean out many more places. It is reported that she will move on to Abilene tomorrow and the Abilene saloonkeepers are preparing for her coming.

Tonight, while Mrs. Nation was making a lecture on the street, Mrs. Schilling, the wife of the saloon-keeper whose place was demolished, rushed up to her, exclaiming, "Now, I've got you!" and struck her several blows in the face, cutting a gash under one eye. Mrs. Nation had her face bandaged and continued her lecture on the street. The crowd was too noisy and she adjourned to a church near by, where she finished her address.

Dr. Curry Denies.

Raleigh Post.

Dr. J. L. M. Curry, the agent of the Peabody Educational Fund, who was the subject of a rather sensational debate in the Legislature, arrived in the city last evening from Washington, D. C. In the Legislature the invitation extended Dr. Curry to address the General Assembly was fought by a number of representatives on the alleged ground that the distinguished educator had lobbied in behalf of Congressman Richmond Pearson in his contest against W. T. Crawford for a seat in Congress.

Dr. Curry was interviewed at the Yarborough last evening and gave emphatic denial to the story that he had lobied in Washington for Mr. Pearson, who is his father-in-law.

"There is not one particle of truth in the report from beginning to end," Dr. Curry declared with some emphasis. "I never talked to a witness or a Congressman about this matter. There is not a shade of truth in it. When I address the Legislature I shall devote just one sentence to the incident, and that will be an emphatic denial of the charge. I am surprised at the action of some of the gentlemen who took up the charge and whom I knew personally. I read of the matter in the Washington papers today, and that is the first I had ever heard of it."

Pearson Denies Indignantly.

Washington, D. C. Jan. 23. The Morning Post, Raleigh, N. C.

The attack upon Dr. Curry is outrageously unjust and groundless. I trust that North Carolinians will not allow their sense of decency to be lost in partisanship. Education is useless in the absence of a decent respect for truth and for civilized methods.

Kindly publish this and challenge a scintilla of proof to substantiate the charge. RICHMOND PEARSON.

The woman who is lovely in face form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at C. E Holton's drug store.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24

LET US AGREE.

Sergeant Sam Browne (we hereby promote him to the position of captain) strikes a key note in saying that all we folks can find a number of things upon which to agree, especially, the $250 which he wants for the orphans. It would be a good thing if we could all be satisfied to disagree on some things and let them go at that, and then pull ourselves together to make an effort for the things upon which we can agree. There's Captain Sam's $250 for the orphans; there's Dr. McIver's $100,000 for the girls; there's Major Morehead's $1,000 for the Colonial Monument, and lastly Prof. Grimsley's $5,000 for a public library. All of these things except the former are well under way, and all of them must be accomplished.

Good luck to Captain Sam on his $250.

As one whose work has been nothing but the waiting to come into possession of his patrimony, which a robust parental constitution has too long cheated him out of, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, at the age of sixty years, became King Edward VII. His life has been passed in frivolity, and he has passed that time of life when much can be expected of him. The King of England will present, in his sixty years of wasted energy, a striking contrast to his kinsmen, the Emperor of Germany and the Czar of Russia, both of whom ascended their thrones at an early age, and each of whom has made his impress upon the world.

The Telegram quite severely criticised the 16 members of the Legislature who voted against the resolution asking Dr. J. L. M. Curry to address the Legislature. This criticism was just, even had the accusation which these members brought against Dr. Curry been true. It now turns out that they had been misinformed, which makes the matter the worse. They did not even investigate the trustworthiness of the grounds upon which they acted.

The Asheville Citizen says that Senator Pritchard is very much encouraged at the prospect for his Appalachian Park bill. We sincerely hope that he may get it through. The undertaking is a very important one.

Dr. Curry turned a neat point about the matter of lobbying, and the members did as near the square thing as it was possible to do.

Better Freight Rates.

Winston Journal.

After the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night, the committee on Trade and Transportation held a consultation. Mr. J. J. Norman, chairman of the committee, solicited the aid and co-operation of the business men of the Twin city in the matter of getting better freight rates. Mr. C. A. Hege gave some figures showing how machinery is discriminated against in the matter of freight rates. He requests that every business man in the city interest themselves in the matter and furnish the committee information to their freight. He says it is proposed by the committee to bring the matter before the courts and that the feeble force of simple talking will not be relied on. It was noted how Danville had won a suit before the United States court and that they were now receiving better freight rates. The matter will first be brought to the attention of the Interstate Commerce Commission and then carried to the Supreme Court if necessary. The committee means business.

PUT HIS THUMB BACK.

Dr. McAnnally Performs a Nice Surgical Feat.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

High Point, Jan. 24.—The marriage of Miss Bertha Tomlinson, of this place, to Mr. Arthur Lyon, of Durham, is announced to take place January 30th, at 11 a. m. No invitations have been issued. It will be a quiet home wedding.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Pickett died this afternoon.

Mr. W. H. Dudley has disposed of his fruit and confectionery store to Messrs. Steed & York, and will locate elsewhere.

A party writing from Harrisburg, this State, asks for information as to the whereabouts of Mrs. Ruth who came here from Colorado last October to visit a brother.

Mr. L. Ulrich has accepted a position in South Boston, Va., and left Tuesday for his post of duty.

Dr W. G. Bradshaw and Editor J. J. Fariss today returned from a stay at the North.

A nice piece of surgery was accomplished this week by Dr. W. J. McAnnally. Mr. John Teague, an employee at one of the factories, had his thumb cut off by a lathe. When the doctor went to dress the wound he sent after the dismembered portion of the hand and placed it whence it came. Strange to say it shows sign of knitting back, and in all probability will heal thoroughly.

Mr. Geo. A. Matton, the druggist, is having his store remodeled within. Mr. J. Robert Parker is doing the painting and other work.

Mr. H. A. Bingham, at one time a resident of this place, is here to spend a day or so. He is on his way to Carthage where he has accepted a position with the Carthage Blade.

BUILT HIS OWN SEPULCHER.

An Eccentric Austrian in California Makes Preparations for His Interment.

In a grave built under his own directions the body of John Stivitch, an eccentric Austrian, was laid to rest at Jackson, Cal. Long before death summoned Slivitch the latter designed his own grave, or, more properly speaking, tomb. He spent many days cheerfully drawing up the plans, and with childish delight superintended the construction of the narrow mausoleum. When it was completed he laid himself down to die with a sigh of content, says a San Francisco exchange.

The grave is of ordinary length and width and seven feet deep. Its walls are of concrete and concrete a foot thick lines the bottom. Twelve inches from the bottom were placed four iron bars, upon which rested the coffin. After the coffin had been lowered iron bars were placed in like manner and the same distance from the top, and over them was placed a heavy zinc cover, fitting perfectly tight. Over this will now be placed a layer of concrete of the same thickness as on the walls, and on top will be the marble bearing the name, place of birth, age and date of death.

This manner of burial had been a hobby with Stivitch for a long time, and when he made his will he set aside $800 to cover the expense, the same being on deposit in a bank of Amador county, to be turned over to the contractor on completion of the work and its approval by a nephew, Andrew Perovich, who is named as executor in the will. Stivitch was 73 years old, a miner; had lived here many years and had many friends. He leaves an estate of several thousand dollars, but no nearer relatives than the nephew named.

The old man had no special disease, but had been failing for months. When told that the work on his peculiar grave had progressed as far as possible he remarked to Dr. Gall, his physician:

"Doctor, if you let me die to-night I will give you $100." But it was not to be. He lived eight days longer, during which time many citizens visited the cemetery to inspect the resting place for all that was mortal of the odd old Austrian.

Americans are apt to regard the Chinese, writes W. J. Johnston, in Success, as lacking in progressive spirit and inventive genius. While this is true to some extent, a visit to China makes one realize that western nations are indebted to the Celestial empire for many important inventions and discoveries which we are prone to regard as part of our own civilization. It is to them we owe the mariner's compass, invented by them over 1,500 years ago. The building of ships with water-tight compartments was also first introduced by the Chinese, and to them we are indebted for the discovery of gunpowder.

Prior to the establishment of any banking system in Europe, and while America was still in a state of savagery, China boasted of the same excellent banking system it has in operation to-day.

WANT A NEW APPLE.

Growers in Maine Trying to Produce Showy Fruit.

History of One Variety That Made a Name—The Cider Season and the Awful Effects of the Hard Stuff.

Maine's apple crop varies from 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 bushels in a good year, to 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels in an off year. Millions of dollars have been spent in trying to induce the trees to give a uniform yield every year so that the fluctuations from 50 cents a barrel in good years to two and four dollars a barrel in off years would no longer disturb the prosperity of the community, but no one has made any headway toward success, says the New York Sun.

For the past ten years most of the orchardists have been trying to develop new varieties of fruit that will look well and stand shipment to London and Liverpool markets, where there is a quick demand for American apples at fancy prices. The call is loudest for a large, showy, high-colored apple that is hard grained and able to stand a deal of rough knocking about without showing signs of bodily harm. These apples should be good keepers and beautiful to look at, but their eating and cooking qualities may be of the worst without detracting from their value, the English purchaser seeming to make his selection with his eyes alone.

Twenty years ago Peter Gideon, of Minneapolis, sent to Maine for scions and seeds of hardy apples, writing that he had spent a fortune and most of his life trying to grow fruit in Minnesota. A bundle of scions from Bangor orchards and a few quarts of seeds, some of which were from the native cherry crab, were forwarded to his address. Nothing was heard from him for four or five years. Then the newspapers began to tell of a wonderful new and hardy seedling which Mr. Gideon had produced from a crabseed grown in Bangor. According to the circulars this new apple, which was named the Wealthy, would live in a climate where a willow would freeze to death, and would continue to bear year after year without a vacation in a century. Later trials have verified many of these assertions. The Wealthy has driven the apple-growing belt 50 miles further north, all across the United States, and has converted thousands of acres of worthless stony land into productive orchards; but as the fruit ripens early and decays in a few weeks, it is worthless for the market and no additional revenues were derived from the discovery, though more cider was made than ever before, and the Wealthy apple was roundly denounced in hundreds of meetings as the greatest curse that ever invaded a temperance community. At present the Maine orchardist is vexed with too many kinds of apples that ripen and rot in September, and he is still looking for a thrifty, fine-grained and good-flavored kind that will bear every year and will keep until late in the spring. The man who will discover such an apple can earn a fortune and the lasting gratitude of an expectant public.

Cider making begins with the first windfalls early in September. The first pressing from the apple pulp is drawn off into barrels to be sold as sweet cider in the city markets as long as it remains true to name, the remainder to be left in barrels with wire gauze over the bungholes, where the air makes it over into hard cider.

Very little cider of the first pressing finds its way to the vinegar barrel, for while a family can buy vinegar or go without, no one can contemplate the approach of cold weather with cheerfulness unless he has laid in a large stock of hard cider. In addition to the natural way of hardening cider there are several approved methods of intensifying and hastening the process. The one most in vogue is to boil the cider until it is reduced to one-half of its original bulk. A larger or smaller quantity of new rum or alcohol, the amount varying according to the means and taste of the maker, is then added to the boiled product so it may "keep," and the mixture is put away in safe storage. When this kind of hard cider contains enough alcohol it can be used at any time, and is warranted to do good execution if taken in sufficient quantity.

The oldest, and all things considered the best, way to make hard cider is to fill a barrel from a press and put it in a cold outbuilding, where the frost of winter will work in from the outside and freeze all the contents except a small core of nearly pure alcohol in the center of the cask. When distinguished callers come visiting or when cider is needed for some great emergency a bit is bored through the cask and the shell of ice until the middle of the barrel is reached, when the precious fluid is drawn forth and mixed with hot rum and is ready for use. Men who are not familiar with the variety of cider will be wise if they partake sparingly of it until they see how it affects those who have become used to the beverage. Sober and decent citizens have become irresponsible maniacs aftr taking three glasses of the mixture, and innocent young men have committed assaults with intent to kill upon their dearest relatives when they had passed an evening in its company.

In the local vernacular plain hard cider without any addition is called booze, hard cider with rum or alcohol bears the name of stone wall and the liquid heart of a frozen barrel is honored by the title of broad ax or split-your-head.

A man came up to me one day after service in a frontier town, and was pleased to address me in this manner: "Say, parson, that there service and sermon was grand. I wouldn't have missed 'em for five dollars." When I suggested that he hand me the difference between the amount he had put in the collection basket and the figure he mentioned, for my missionary work, he stopped suddenly, looked at me with his mouth wide open, and then slowly pulled from his pocket $4.90, which he handed to me without a word.—Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Mr. Wharton owned only an half interest in the store, the remainder being the property of his sister, Mrs. Lindsay, of McLeansville. It is not yet known what disposition of the stock will be made Over half of the liabilities are for notes which his father is security, and money borrowed of his father.

Man Killed in Danville.

The southbound New York and Florida Express in crossing Main street in North Danville this morning about five o'clock struck the buggy of Mr. Alride, a farmer who lives about three miles from Danville, killing the horse and demolishing the buggy. When the train reached the Danville station nearly three-quarters of a mile from the scene of the tragedy, the mangled and badly broken up body of Mr. Alride was found on the pilot of the engine. He died in great agony about seven o'clock. No particulars have been learned as to why the accident was not discovered until the train reached Danville.

The directors of the Vanstory Clothing Company met yesterday afternoon. The business was found to be in fine condition, and the same officers were re-elected.

Mr. Stroud Honorably Discharged.

Capt. Z. B. Vance, of Charlotte, spent the afternoon in the city. He came here to give Mr. Peter Stroud, whose term of enlistment expired today, an honorable discharge.

Mr. Stroud has been in charge of the Greensboro recruiting station for several months. Mr. Peter Watkins, also of the recruiting office here, was made corporal.

A Geensboro Poet.

Salisbury Sun.

James E. McGirt, the Greensboro darkey who has for years been writing poetry, is in the city today. He has had his poems published in book form and is selling the book. Some of his poems are really meritorious. The title of the volume is "Avenging the Maine and Other Poems." McGirt was formerly an employe in a tobacco factory at Greensboro.

A recent writer has described the cactus as "the vegetable camel of the desert." This plant can not only go for months without water, but at the end of the period is capable of furnishing a cupful of refreshing fluid from its roots. Similarly the kurrajong and "supplejack" of the dry districts of Australia can remain alive without water for periods sometimes measured by years, and the former, even under such conditions, is said to sprout afresh although every branch is cut off. In the account of the voyage of Lord Macartney's embassy to China there is an interesting account of the plants which flourished through a drought of three years on one of the Cape Verde islands, at which the expedition called. Among those especially named as surviving are certain species of palms, including the borassus, the asclepias gigantea, the physic-nut tree, the sugar apple tree and certain kinds of mimosa. Cultivated plants, such as corn, sugar canes and plantains, are stated to have been totally destroyed during the same period.

From the Increase in Our Business

We feel that the people appreciate good work. A new collar and cuff starcher, which will complete the list of an up-to-date plant, will arrive shortly, which will enable us to give our patrons quicker and better service. With thanks for past favors, and soliciting a share for the future.

SAVING HIS DOG

JOHN GORRIE had long determined to emigrate to New Zealand, but had remained in his native county of Fife as long as his mother was alive. When she was laid to rest in Cults' kirkyard, he and his dog sailed for "the strong New England of the southern pole." His brothers had preceded him some years before and each had taken with him a collie from the old homestead, black and white dogs, rather small in size, but wiser than most. Since their departure, for fear of importing hydrophobia, regulations had been put in force not allowing home dogs to land in Australian colonies unless they underwent a quarantine of deadly length and vigor, which few survived.

John Gorrie, who had seen promising scions of this piebald dog family go with his brothers, rejected the warning that his "Gala" would not be allowed to land. He paid his dog's passage, stubbornly determined his slim, four-footed friend would also herd the flocks on the "virgin lawns" of Brighter Britain. Gala was a gentle-eyed, supple creature, as clever a shepherdess as ever drove the silly sheep to market. She had a sorry time of it during the passage, for the cramped space and steamboat laws ill-suited one whose lithe limbs could carry her untiringly. John Gorrie, standing at the bows of his good ship, a burly, hard-featured, shrewd man, wore a glum look on his stern face as he wondered how his good collie was to be landed. The very idea of killing his valuable and constant companion made the heart of this big man very sore. He treasured that meek, wistful-faced black and white dog as much as he treasured the pocketbook which contained all his worldly wealth.

He met with nothing but Job's comforters on board. The captain one day on inspection paused to say to him briefly: "I wonder a canny Scot like you was befooled into paying a collie's passage." The carpenter offered to take Gala back to England, but John replied: "I'd rather pit her doun myself than gie her awa." He knew Gala's heart would break if he left her. He still had a mulishly stubborn belief that somehow he could land his dog. He had written to Sandy Gorrie the mail before he sailed, telling him Gala and he were coming. Sandy, he knew, would meet him at the Bluff (where the steamer first touched) and he hoped their two Scotch heads would have wits enough in them to devise some plan to evade the law and save his white-breasted Gala before he was forced to disembark at Dunedin. The thought of "piting doun," as he called killing, the fond dog which gazed on him with its loving eyes raised to his puzzled face, who tried with pathetic playfulness to coax away his sadness, cost that stoical, hard-featured man many a sorrowful day, many a wakeful night. It was a cold September spring forenoon when they arrived at the Bluff, and the new land had a grim air about it which John said truly "minded him of hame." The steamer had to wait a day there.

"You must declare poor little Gala," said the purser to Gorrie. "I don't think she can even get a chance of being quarantined, for they have an extra panic on about home dogs just now."

"Aye," answered Gorrie, with the sulky brevity of his native Fife.

"Good Gala—nice old lass," said the purser, stroking her intelligent, long head. "It is a pity you brought her."

"Aye," again answered Gorrie, looking down into her plaintive, beseeching eyes, for with her ready instinct she guessed mischief was brewing.

Sandy Gorrie met his brother, and as they stood talking together the New Zealand farmer praised Gala, for she was endeared to him by memories of home.

"She is real, like father's 'pyat.' It is an awfie peety man about her, and mine's dee'd last nicht, mind you, she was nigh 12 years," said Sandy.

"Whaur did she dee?" said John, eagerly.

"At my sister-in-law's ower there. Mag was getting that auld, Mrs. Christie she kept her when I was in the north, and last Sabbath she just lay doun and dwined and dee's."

"Whaur is the body?"

"Buried by yon cabbage tree," said Sandy, pointing to a lone, shock-headed tree which stood as sentinel over a rocky bay, and behind it rose smoke, telling of a homestead in the hollow.

"Man," said John, earnestly, a light of hope gleaming in his deep-set eyes, "howk her up and I'll save my bonnie Gala. We dinna sail afore the nicht and I'll dae wi' your Magpie as the captain did wi' the sodgers. She'll be the example, no my Gala. I went to a reading at Ladybank last Martimas it would be, and the meenister, no ours, but anither, he telt aboot three sodgers that were late frae camp, when the duke of Wellington was fechtin' in Spain. Weel, the duke, he said they were to hang for it, but so mony guid men were killed the captain he was laith to sacrifice three strong chaps, but the duke said for an example to the ithers it maun me. The captain, he was a clever yun. He sent off the three men to anither pairt of our army and he takes three deid men and hangs them on a tree. The morrow's morn when the general gaed by he saw three deid men and they rere a' fair contented, for the deid men who were of no use mair, they made as good an example as if they'd done away wi' the three live lads."

John Gorrie brisked into sudden alacrity. He went ashore. Gala was tied up on deck, a troubled dog, looking with anxious eyes after his master's receding figure.

"What about the dog that has been declared?" asked the customs officer.

"I don't know," said the captain. "The Scotchman who owns her is ashore at present. I'll speak to him myself when he comes back. Nice dog, too! The ladies aft are all making such an outcry about it. The dog was a favorite with them, she was so gentle and intelligent."

"Gorrie, the owner is ashore, but he said 'he wad be pitten' her doun this nicht,' and he sent the customs and the laws of his new country to regions below," remarked the purser, imitating Gorrie very creditably. "He'll dae it hissel, none o' your manglin,' a stane and a string and happit in a bit o' his ain plaid."

That afternoon Gorrie brought from the shore a "muckle stane." He was silent and sad, sitting as in the "doleful dumps," stroking Gala's shapely, sleek head. There he remained till dark, a stolid figure with his piteous-faced collie contemplating him. His brothers came out again when the saloon passengers were at dinner. Many of them bemoaned the fate of the dog that had been their fellow-passenger for six weeks, for Gala had been noted and admired by all. David, the eldest of the Gorries, wore a shepherd's checked plaid folded across his big chest, and over that an ample Highland cloak flung on in negligent manner, half to hide his arm, which, for a time, he wore in a sling. The two men talked to John and accompanied him down below, saying they would help him with Gala. Once in the cabin David Gorrie took out of his plaid a glassy-eyed, dead Magpie, and proceeded to tie up Gala's legs, while John bound a cruel mixture of gag and muzzle round her long nose. All the while the startled but obedient animal looked up to her master with melting tenderness in her trusting eyes. Into her sage head, however, John implanted the idea all was well. He assured her, saying: "Be canny the noo, lassie—Dauve wull be douce wi' ye." Into his plaid, where he had often on the Fife Lomonds in years past carried a sick lamb, David Gorrie slipped the bound Gala.

"It is a guid job she is o' the wee sort," said John; "they aye said at Cupar she was owre sma', but I'm recht pleased I keepit her and no the ither I sold to Andrew Bethune. She was unco' big."

He drew the flap of the Highland cloak over her gagged face, and the arm supposed to be in a sling kept her secure and quiet.

Gorrie saw his two brothers in the boat and watched them row off in the dark toward the shore.. Who, seeing these three big, raw-boned Scotchmen, would think they were consummate actors? No one guessed John Gorrie's depression and grief as he sat in public that afternoon caressing Gala was all assumed. The sturdy giant, David Gorrie, rolled in plaid and cloak, appeared to onlookers but a simple shepherd from up country come only to greet the "new chum" brother, having to knock off work because of his hurt arm. Three cunning schemers, these obtuse, loutish Fifers proved themselves to be. Gorrie went back to his cabin and blackened old Magpie's grizzled muzzle with a piece of coal. She was marked like all her breed, hair for hair, the same as her younger sister, except where age had put his white sign on her. He tied a stone around her neck, gashed the old dog's throat, and, for fear a closer inspection might prove Gala's dead body somewhat elderly, he enveloped it in the corner of his plaid as in a shroud. He carried her forward, his knife in his hand, and walked up to the captain, who was seeing if he could not clear out that night.

"I did it myself, sir," he said, touching his hat to the commander; "I could na' thole anither handlin' her and my brither thocht a stane might slip."

Gorrie bent over the stark body of the once active collie in his arms, gazing at it remorsefully, for the honest shepherd had become for the love of his dog a wily actor.

"Quite right, my man. Here, quartermaster, tell the customs officer to look here, that dog we declared is dead. I'm sorry for you, shepherd, for she was a nice beast, but, as I said, you should not have brought her. Will you have a glass of whisky?"

"Thank you kindly, sir. I've no objection to a dram, but by your leave I'll put her ower. For a' their regulations and hydrophobia talk there is no a collie in New Zealand, forbye Fife, to beat my Gala!"

He stepped to the side, lowered the rigid black and white body, and threw her overboard into a watery grave.

Soon the engines began their work, and they steamed on in the clear night to Port Chalmers, Dunedin's seaport. Gorrie was "dowie and wae"—every one supposed it was because of the dog's death, but his extra solemn looks were caused by anxiety as to her safety.

The body of a black and white collie floated ashore at the Bluff. The stone had slipped from its neck. "A warning not to bring out home dogs," said the customs officials, pointing to the swollen, distorted corpse, little guessing that among the tussock covered hills of Southland an agile collie, of the color of a shepherd's plaid, "mobbed" the far scattered flocks, or gavorted gayly at the heels of John Gorrie's cantering steed, and this selfsame collie answered to the name of Gala.—Globe-Democrat.

Victoria.

To the Lady of the Robes:

Lady of of the Robes, unlock
Queen's wardrobe; find purple frock,
Find the gold lace, too, again—
Give her one more golden reign.

In the chamber there, unseen,
Robe, in splendor, your dead Queen;
Splendor never made her vain—
Give her one more golden reign.

Robe her, while the old bells swing
Mist of weeping from their ring,
While they toll from olden fane,
"Give her one more golden reign."

Let her sleep in puple things,
Low, beside the bones of Kings,
While we, too, this side the main,
Pray for one more golden reign.

Though in deep, empurpled gloom
Of the crownless, throneless tomb,
Crown her,—up there,—Lord, again;
Give her one more golden reign.

Throneless, crownless, while asleep!
Give her throne and crown to keep;
Crown her, crown her, Lord again,
For one longer golden reign.

JOHN R. MORRIS,
Charlotte Observer.

He Sneezed.

Washington Post.

Everybody knows what a nervous and erratic character is General "Joe" Wheeler, of Alabama. When he delivered a speech in the House he was like a fly on a hot griddle, and the Record always contained about a dozen columne which he added to his speech after he had apparently concluded. At Santiago, it will be remembered, he climbed a tree in his anxiety to see everything that was going on, but all the war stories told about him in connection with the Cuban campaign do not equal the incident of the civil war, which an ex-Confederate in the Senate recalled yesterday.

One day the Confederate army was hurried off upon a forced march to intercept Grant. At the close of the day the soldiers were without rations, and Col. Russell seized a flour mill, which was run by a little stream emptying into the Tennessee River. The mill ground away for an hour or two and then the water in the creek was exhausted. At this juncture General Wheeler arrived upon the scene.

"What's the trouble?" said the General.

"No water," said Colonel Russell.

General Wheeler danced around in his nervous fashion. "Colonel," he said, "why don't you establish a line of men with buckets, as they do at a fire, and have them pass up from the stream below and throw it upon the wheel?"

Colonel Russell did not laugh. He drew himself up, saluted his superior in military fashion and sneezed. If a phonograph had caught the sneeze there would have been evidence that the Colonel swore.

WAR IN VICTORIA'S "PEACEFUL REIGN."

The following figures show the number of wars in which England took part under Queen Victoria, the lives lost and the money cost:

British soldiers slain—133,000

British money expended—$1,895,000,000.

Years of Victoria's reign—62½.

1845—First Afghan war.

1840-1842—Chinese "Opium" war.

Sixteen thousand English slain; entire army wiped out.

1845—First Sikh war.

1846—Second Sikh war.

1853-1855—Crimean war.

England's loss 24,000 in lives, $345,000,000 in money.

1856-1857—Indian Mutiny.

1856-1850—Second Chinese war.

1867-1868—Abyssinian war.

1872—Ashantee war.

Much loss of life in costly campaign against savages.

1878-1880—Second Afghan war.

1879—Rulu war.

Britons thrashed by savages; Prince Imperial slain.

1880—First Transvaal war

Rout of Majuba Hill, Sir G. Colley killed.

1882—Soudan war.

1885—Burmah annexed.

1896-1898—Kitchener in the Soudan.

1899—Second Transvaal war.

Not yet ended. Over 12,000 British lives. Cost over $500,000,000.

A New Era.

Greensboro Patriot.

In North Carolina a new era is dawning. The state has passed through the darkness of a black night and is witnessing the rising sun of a glorious day—a day that shall cause peace and prosperity to reign within the borders of the Commonwealth. With this rich experience and broader life comes the knowledge that passion and prejudice have, to a great extent, been relegated to the rear to make room for tolerance and independence: that tolerance which will allow a citizen to think and act for himself without incurring the risk of damnation at the hands of those to whose policies he is opposed, and an independence which will save one from following blindly any leader or movement. In a word, the day has come in North Carolina when there is no excuse for a man not owning his own soul and exercising the prerogatives of proprietorship to the fullest extent.

Pepsin preparations often fail to relieve indigestion because they can digest only albumnious foods. There is one preparation that digests all classes of food, and that is Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It cures the worst cases of indigestion and gives instant relief, for it digests what you eat. Howard Gardner.

RHEUMATISM—CATARRH—DISEASES CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of catarrh and rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments, doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air blood purifiers, have failed to do, B. B. B. always promptly reaches the real cause and roots out and drives from the bones, joints, mucuous membrane, and entire system the specific poison in the blood that causes rheumatism and catarrh. B. B. B. is the only remedy strong enough to do this and cure ond so there can never be a return to the symptoms. Don't give up hope, but try B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) or 3 Bs.

For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner, in Greensboro, at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.

PREVENTED A TRAGEDY.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had kept her awake every night. She tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

This season there is a large death rate among children from croup and lung troubles. Prompt action will save the little ones from these terrible diseases. We know of nothing so certain to give instant relief as One Minute Cough Cure. It can also be relied upon in grippe and all throat and lung troubles of adults. Pleasant to take. Howard Gardner.

STORY OF A SLAVE.

To be bound hand and foot for yeasr by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says "My wife has been been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle-working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, rundown people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist.

When threatened by pneumonia or any other lung trouble, prompt relief is necessary, as it is dangerous to delay. We would suggest that One Minute Cough Cure be taken as soon as indications of having taken cold are noticed. It cures quickly and its early use prevents consumption. Howard Gardner.

Country Dance.

The residence of Mr. Tom Gladstone, about five miles south of the city, was the scene of an old-fashioned merry dance last night, in which about twelve couples of cotillion lovers from the city participated. It was a sort of house warming affair, Mr. Gladstone having just moved into a commodious new residence. In addition to the coterie of quadrille whirlers from the city, a large crowd of young people from the country participated in the amusements, which lasted until after the midnight hour.

Death of Mrs. Lewis.

Mrs. Derastus Lewis, whose illness was noted yesterday, died at her home on Arlington street at one o'clock this morning. She was taken sick with pneumonia on Sunday last. The funeral will occur tomorrow at two o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev. T. M. Johnson. The burial will be in Greene Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Lewis was sixty years of age, and had been almost a life long member of the Methodisit Protestant church. She leaves a husband, a son and three daughters.

Carried a Still With Them.

Two men in a buggy, with a still in the back part, was one of the sights on South Elm street yesterday afternoon. One of the men was so well filled with the product of the still that he was scarcely able to retain his seat, and the other was but little better off.
